

November 22, 2010

First Graders sharpened their observation skills during a field trip to the Audubon Naturalist Society's Woodend Nature Sanctuary. They made predictions about habitats and tested them while on a hike. They learned about plant and animal adaptations and found evidence to support their new knowledge.

And they had fun!

